

ABSTRACT

A liquid stored in the liquid storing means within a housing is supplied to a carrier. A high voltage applied to a discharge end of the carrier and an opposed electrode to emit tiny ionized liquid particles. At least part of the liquid storing means is detachable to the housing for easy replenishment of the liquid.